Showdown in Korea May Await Other China Moves

Authorities Indicate Waiting Attitude Is Plain in Exchanges of View Between Washington and General Douglas MacArthur

Washington, Nov. 4 (AP)-General Douglas MacArthur may have been advised from Washington to avoid a showdown over Chinese intervention in North Koorea until the Communists' intentions become clearer.

While official concern is mounting over the reported Chinese reinforcement of the North Koreans, the administration inclination is to wait for the dangerous situation to develop further before any open challenge to the Peiping regime.

Responsible authorities indicated today that this waiting attitude has been made plain in exchanges of view with MacArthur's headquarters, and has been reflected in the cautious course United Nations forces have followed since the first signs of intervention.

Army reports from Korea have mentioned small Chinese units in action with North Koreans, but MacArthur's headquarters declined to estimate their total number. Officials here have been even more close mouthed. An AP dispatch from the battlefront today said flatly that Chinese Communists had cut off two U.S. Marine battalions in northeast Korea.

What the State Department and Pentagon want to pin down unmistakably is whether (1) the Chinese Communists have embarked on large scale intervention at the risk of setting off a new world war, or (2) engaged in a Soviet-style adventure in power politics which could be short lived or turn into protracted border fighting. American officials are gravely concerned over the threat that the guerrilla fighting like that recently beaten down in Greece may be duplicated in North Korea, but seemingly prefer that prospect to a full-dress war with China. Should evidence become inescapable that entire Chinese divisions or other large units have been moved across the border from Manchuria, the next step would be up to the U.N.

AMERICANS' FAILURE TO VOTE

We Americans don't like to be preached to about our shortcomings. But sometimes there's no other way to stir us up. Take, for instance, this matter of voting. Apparently it doesn't do any good to talk in general terms about voting as a solemn duty or a rare privilege. Lectures along that line have been delivered for years. But in 1948, a presidential election year, only around half of all eligible voters actually went to the polls. If blunt language is needed to make Americans understand the shamefulness of this performance, then it ought to be used.

We think we have the greatest democracy in the world. Yet in free elections in the past few years, Britain, Australia, Italy and even West Germany have vastly outstripped us in the basic democratic job of voting. Note that two of these countries had had long experience under dictators. Yet each found more than eighty per cent of the people voting when their first real elections were

We sneer at Russia and her satellites because they are limited to a single slate of cause they are limited to a single slate of be said, for all practical purposes, that everyone candidates when they vote, and can merely voted, indicating an interest in such matters far beyond the proportions even of a presidential electronic description. record "yes" or "no." But fifty per cent of beyon our own prospective voters didn't even exercise that much choice in 1948.

Constantly we have it dinned into our ears nowadays that if we're to lick world communism we must sell democracy abroad. The uncomfortable fact is we haven't been practicing it as well as some of the people we're supposed to be selling it to: the West Germans, for example.

None of this means, of course, that we don't care about freedom and its rights and duties. It just means that we've allowed the complexity and fascination of our life to distract us from our responsibilities.

By now, though, we ought to have seen enough of the world's present perils to realize that our beautiful, gadget-filled existence might be wiped right off the face of the globe if we don't make the right decisions. Those decisions are fundamentally the people's job. And they can only make them at the polls.

November 7 is another voting day, the first general election since 1948. The world will be watching to see whether Americans have learned to prize their voting rights more than another rubber of bridge.

LEARNING BY EXPERIENCE

The experience of the Korean war evidently did our armed forces much good, from a military standpoint. Serious weaknesses were revealed in intelligence, in supplies and training. These faults appear to have largely been analyzed, and remedies started. Had they remained untouched during, say, a war with Russia, it might have been calamitous.

Great Britain had the same experience in the South African war, half a century ago. This was the first serious struggle, except for wars in India, which the English had undergone since the Crimean war which ended in 1856. The outset was dismaying. English generalship proved incompetent, and for a time it seemed that South Africa might be lost. Then the army was drastically overhauled, and eventually the war was won. This rough experience proved a life-saver when World War I came. The Germans would have made mincemeat out of the British army that began the South African war; the army that fought them to a standstill had its birth in the disasters of South Africa.

MAKING VOTING EASY

The military services are to be commended for taking considerable pains to make it as easy as possible for servicemen away from their homes to vote in the fall elections. They provided postal card forms with which men could apply for absentee ballots to those

their stay at home fellows, yet there is habit home with them.

'These Days'

A SOCIOLOGICAL EXPERIMENT

For 17 years, there has been no strike in the Weirton steel plant and the C.I.O. was unable to unionize it. This was a direct result of two ideas: 1. To provide maximum year-round employment; 2. To pay higher wages and provide better working conditions than other steel companies. This was possible because there were no strikes.

An independent union operated in the plant. The existence of this union was fought by the C.I.O., using every device available including long hearings before the National Labor Relations

Board and the courts. Finally, the independent union was declared to be a company union, was outlawed, and an NLRB election was ordered.

For 90 days prior to that election, management was hamstrung, it being forbidden to do any campaigning on the assumption that anything said might have the effect of invalidating the election. No such restriction was placed on the C.I.O. It conducted an active campaign to win votes. Phil Murray himself visited Weirton, addressed an audience, and announced a victory.

Meanwhile, the workers organized a new independent union which was validated by the Natioal Labor Relations Board and placed on the ballot. The election was closely supervised by the agents of the board and they counted the votes.

Eligible and available to vote were 11,520 employes. The total vote cast was 11,253. Challenged by the C.I.O. were 381 votes. Improperly marked ballots thrown out amounted to 40. This then is the final result:

Independent union 7,291

C.I.O. 3,454

No union at all In view of all the circumstances, these figures may be viewed sociologically beyond the affairs of this one company. The employes live in two adjacent cities, Weirton, W. Va., and Steubenville, O. They are of incompany racial and religious origins. Weirton is a new community, built about the mill which is its sole industry. Steubenville is an older community with several industries. Weirton has never been unionized by either the A. F. of L. or the C.I.O.; Steubenville may be regarded as a C.I.O. town. Yet, only 87 out of 11,253 voted for

First, it strikes me that this indicates a definite desire for some type of union organization. The workers in this plant have had no strike for 17 years, nor have they had to pay heavy union dues, assessments, strike fund contributions or anything of the sort. But they want a union. They want organized representation. Secondly, the fact that only 40 ballots were thrown out as invalid is astonishing in any election of more than 11,000. In these steel towns, it used to be that large numbers of workers were illiterate, many of them brought over by immigrant contractors. The present crop are elementary and high school graduates. They are not only literate but they are keenly interested in their problems. Given a free chance to state their wishes by a secret ballot, they express themselves.

It is also interesting to note that of the 11,520 eligible and available to vote, all but 267 voted. Among these 267 must have been some who, in the ordinary wear and tear of life, could not be there on the balloting day. In a word, it might

It would be worth knowing how the vote stood by age groups, by length of employment, and by labor turnover, but I find that such information is unavailable because the NLRB correctly conducts a secret ballot, the voters not being identifi-

Yet, it is to be noted that while the C.I.O. received about 30 percent of the total vote, workers in this company between the ages of 18 and 29 amount to about 33 percent and those who have had five years service or less amount to about 50 percent. According to the company, the turnover among workers who have been with them more than five years is negligible.

This election is interesting because it did not involve wages, hours or working conditions nor was it a jurisdictional quarrel between the C.I.O. and the A. F. of L. or even John L. Lewis's District 50. The only question at issue was whether the workers would belong to an international union or to one limited to their plant under their own control. They voted about 70 to 30 for their own

SOME CAUSES OF FATIGUE

It is reported by an observing wholesale druggist that 25 per cent of all the middle-aged physicians in a certain city are using vitamin B1 or vitamin B complex to offset their feelings of fatigue or tiredness. Some striking results in giving middleaged men a "lift" in morale by use of vitamin B or B complex have been reported.

Another cause of tiredness or fatigue in middleaged men is believed due to change of life. Just as gradual wasting of the ovaries causes the change in women, so, it is stated, does wasting of the male sex glands cause change of life. Whether this form of treatment helps to reduce fatigue, or fatigue is due to lack of vitamins, is still under experimental

In American Practitioner, Dr. Murray Y. Silver states that fatigue is frequently attributed to low blood pressure have low normal pressure. In a previous article I referred to a family in which both parents and three adult children all had low blood pressure. What may not be considered is that if an individual has some chronic low infection are individual has some chronic low infection over months or years, his blood pressure will be high for some time, then become low and remain low. With low blood pressure, there is most often a tired feeling.

Dr. Silver states further that most patients complaining of fatigue have a functional (not organic) illness. "When a physician has satisfied himself as to the absence of cancer or other acute or chronic debilitating disease, he is then in a better chronic debilitating disease, he is then in a better position to concentrate of or study the functional distase." Many fatigued patients have anxiety states, many are depressed, and many bored with life. With nothing special to look forward to each day, "lying around," becomes a habit and the patient feels even too tired to rest.

Fatigue occurs more often in women than in ratigue occurs more often in women than in men because of the more routine nature of their daily work and responsibilities. Thus it is pointed out that more can believe for fatigue patients by changing their daily routine than by use of drugs.

If, then, you are tired and apparently have no cause to be tired, an investigation by your physician and dentist as to presence of infection should be the first thought. Afterwards can come search for lack of vitamins, lack of gland juices, and the cause of anxiety states. cause of anxiety states,

AMERICANS' FAILURE TO VOTE

We Americans don't like to be preached to about our shortcomings. But sometimes there's no other way to stir us up. Take, for instance, this matter of voting. Apparently it doesn't do any good to talk in general rare privilege. Lectures along that line have been delivered for years. But in 1948, a presidential election year, only around half of all eligible voters actually went to the no union at all. polls. If blunt language is needed to make Americans understand the shamefulness of this performance, then it ought to be used.

We think we have the greatest democracy in the world. Yet in free elections in the past few years, Britain, Australia, Italy and even West Germany have vastly outstripped us in the basic democratic job of voting. Note that two of these countries had had long experience under dictators. Yet each found more than eighty per cent of the people voting when their first real elections were held.

record "yes" or "no." But fifty per cent of our own prospective voters didn't even exercise that much choice in 1948.

nowadays that if we're to lick world communism we must sell democracy abroad. The uncomfortable fact is we haven't been practicing it as well as some of the people we're supposed to be selling it to: the West Germans, for example.

None of this means, of course, that we don't care about freedom and its rights and duties. It just means that we've allowed the complexity and fascination of our life to distract us from our responsibilities.

By now, though, we ought to have seen enough of the world's present perils to realize that our beautiful, gadget-filled existence might be wiped right off the face of the globe if we don't make the right decisions. Those decisions are fundamentally the people's job. And they can only make them at the polls.

November 7 is another voting day, the first general election since 1948. The world will be watching to see whether Americans have learned to prize their voting rights more than another rubber of bridge.

LEARNING BY EXPERIENCE

The experience of the Korean war evidently did our armed forces much good, from a military standpoint. Serious weaknesses were revealed in intelligence, in supplies and training. These faults appear to have largely been analyzed, and remedies started. Had they remained untouched during, say, a war with Russia, it might have been calamitous.

Great Britain had the same experience in the South African war, half a century ago. This was the first serious struggle, except for wars in India, which the English had undergone since the Crimean war which ended in 1856. The outset was dismaying. English generalship proved incompetent, and for a time it seemed that South Africa might be lost. Then the army was drastically overhauled, and eventually the war was won. This rough experience proved a life-saver when World War I came. The Germans would have made mincemeat out of the British army that began the South African war: the army that fought them to a standstill had its birth in the disasters of South Africa.

MAKING VOTING EASY

The military services are to be commended for taking considerable pains to make it as easy as possible for servicemen away from their homes to vote in the fall elections. They provided postal card forms with which men could apply for absentee ballots to those states which will accept a form request, and took steps to make sure that the attention of every service man was called to the possibility of voting by absentee ballot.

cast ballots also deserve credit. Nothing privilege, since more effort was needed to could be easier than is the process of voting exercise it. They may even bring the voting for their stay-at-home fellows, yet there is habit home with them.

'These Days' By GEORGE E. SOKOLSKY

A SOCIOLOGICAL EXPERIMENT

For 17 years, there has been no strike in the Weirton steel plant and the C.I.O. was unable to unionize it. This was a direct result of two ideas: 1. To provide maximum year-round employment; 2. To pay higher wages and provide better working conditions than other steel companies. This was possible because there were no strikes.

An independent union operated in the plant. The existence of this union was fought by the C.I.O., using every device available including long hearings before the National Labor Relations Board and the courts. Finally, the independent union was declared to be a company union, was out-lawed, and an NLRB election was ordered.

For 90 days prior to that election, management was hamstrung, it being forbidden to do any campaigning on the assumption that anything said might have the effect of invalidating the election. No such restriction was placed on the C.I.O. It conducted an active campaign to win votes. Phil Murray himself visited Weirton, addressed an audience, and announced a victory.

Meanwhile, the workers organized a new independent union which was validated by the Natioal Labor Pelations Board and placed on the ballot. The election was closely supervised by the agents of the board and they counted the votes. Eligible and available to vote were 11,520 employes. The total vote cast was 11,253. Challenged by the C.I.O. were 381 votes. Improperly marked ballots thrown out amounted to 40. This then is the final result:

Independent union 7,291

In view of all the circumstances, these figures may be viewed sociologically beyond the affairs of this one company. The employes live in two adjacent cities, Weirton, W. Va., and Steubenville, O. They are of numerous racial and religious terms about voting as a solemn duty or a origins. Weirton is a new community, built about the mill which is its sole industry. Steubenville is an older community with several industries. Weirton has never been unionized by either the A. F. of L. or the C.I.O.; Steubenville may be regarded as a C.I.O. town. Yet, only 87 out of 11,253 voted for

First, it strikes me that this indicates a definite desire for some type of union organization. The workers in this plant have had no strike for 17 years, nor have they had to pay heavy union dues, assessments, strike fund contributions or anything of the sort. But they want a union. They want organized representation.

Secondly, the fact that only 40 ballots were thrown out as invalid is astonishing in any election of more than 11,000. In these steel towns, it used to be that large numbers of workers were illiterate, many of them brought over by immigrant contractors. The present crop are elementary and high school graduates. They are not only literate but they are keenly interested in their problems. Given a free chance to state their wishes by a secret ballot, they express themselves.

It is also interesting to note that of the 11,520 eligible and available to vote, all but 267 voted. Among these 267 must have been some who, in We sneer at Russia and her satellites because they are limited to a single slate of candidates when they vote, and can merely

Yet, it is to be noted that while the C.I.O. received about 30 percent of the total vote, workers in this company between the ages of 18 and 29 amount to about 33 percent and those who have had five years service or less amount to about 50 percent. According to the company, the turnover among workers who have been with them more than five years is negligible.

This election is interesting because it did not involve wages, hours or working conditions nor was it a jurisdictional quarrel between the C.I.O. and the A. F. of L. or even John L. Lewis's District 50. The only question at issue was whether the workers would belong to an international union or to one limited to their plant under their own control. WILL YOU LOSE YOUR HOME RULE? YOU MIGHT---UNLESS YOU VOTE RIGHT! HERE IS THE REASON:

Congressional Re-apportionment

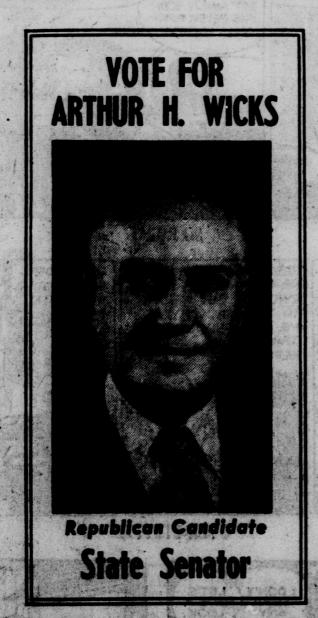

- 1. The 1951 State Legislature is required by law to re-apportion (re-define) the Congressional Districts of this state based on the 1950 federal census.
- 2. It is estimated that New York State will be entitled to 42 Congressmen to represent the people of this state in the House of Representatives in Washington.
- 3. Each upstate Congressional District is now represented by a Congressman who is a resident of, and familiar with, his own district.
- 4. The Governor and the State Senate and Assembly must agree on the new re-apportionment bill before it can be enacted.
- 5. Always, in the past, re-apportionment has been a controversial political issue.

Republican Legislature Needed

- 1. If the Governor is Republican, and the Legislature is Democrat, it is probable that no re-apportionment bill will be enacted in 1951.
- 2. That would mean that in the Congressional elections of 1952 candidates for Congress would be nominated and elected on a state-wide basis (atlarge.)
- 3. The Republican, Democrat, Liberal and American Labor parties would each nominate 42 state-wide candidates for Congressman a total of 168 candidates, who would run at-large like any state candidate.
- 4. Under those circumstances, Ulster County might conceivably be represented in the Congress of the United States by a resident of New York city or any other part of the state.
- 5. The election of a Republican Legislature in Albany will insure your continued right to be represented in Washington by your own Congressman, from your own district.

Escapee Caught

New York, Nov. 4 (AP)-A man who escaped from the Rockland State Hospital yesterday was arrested last night as he was about to enter his home, police reported. Meanwhile his wife, learning that he had escaped, had fled from the apartment with two small children. A sergeant and a patrolman who had been waiting for him nearby quoted him as saying, "I want to see my family. I want to see my children." He went along with them quietly to the East 67th street police station. The six-foot one-inch, 225-pound escapee was identified by police as Leo Oblak, 27, of 401 East 73rd street, a former construction worker.

His Record Has Been Liberal, Progressive, Attracting Wide Approval

Senator Arthur H. Wicks of this city is the Republican candidate to succeed himself in the State Senate.

Senator Wicks was born in New Tork on December 24, 1887, and it an early age moved to Olive Bridge, in Ulster county, where his father purchased a farm. After his father's death, he and his brother operated the farm for several years, after which he moved back to New York, where he obtained a job with the City of New York. He studied civil engineering and later became an engineering inspector for the Public Service Commission and the New York Board of Water Supply.

Senator Wicks acquired Thomson's Laundry, in this city, in 1916, and has since operated that business. In 1926 he was elected a state senator and has served in that capacity since. He is the senior Republican senator in the State Senate. In 1941 he was appointed chairman of the powerful Senate Finance Committee and as such became a legislative leader and a policy-maker in the state government commencing in 1942, upon the election of Governor Thomas

E. Dewey. At the end of the 1949 legislative session, when Senator Benjamin F. Feinberg was appointed chairman of the Public Service Commission by Governor Dewey, Senator Wicks was unanimously elected majority leader and president pro tem of the Senate by his colleagues in the Senate, Democratic as well as Republican.

Senator Wicks represents the counties of Ulster, Greene, Delaware and Sullivan, these four counties constituting the 34th Senatorial District. This district is the largest in the state in area. During his long legislative service, Senator Wicks has introduced

Monticello Repeats as DUSO Cross Country Champions, Kingston Third

Runnerup Spots Give Monties Second Title

Middletown's Vic Oliver Paces Field in 11:23

Middletown High placed the first two finishers in the annual DUSO cross country meet over a soggy, rainswept course here yesterday, but Monticello grabbed four runnerup spots to repeat as league champions.

The Monties scored 28 points.. Middletown had 51 and Kingston finished third with 61. Newburgh Academy, once a terror in DUSO track circles, finished a poor fourth with 84.

Vic Oliver, romped across the finish line first in the excellent time of 11:23 for the 2 1/10 miles layout. It was only three seconds Middletown's flashy veteran, out. It was only three seconds off the all-time DUSO mark set by Bernie Stahl of Kingston.
